Matching Grant Program

The Matching Grant Program allows a U.S. PVO to expand a successful program in new places or initiate new projects. It also enables a U.S. PVO to undertake an experimental or innovative project on the cutting edge of developmental efforts that offers potential for learning and replication.

Now in its 21st year, the Matching Grant Program is the Office of Private and Voluntary Cooperation's (PVC) principal vehicle to help U.S. private and voluntary organizations (PVOs) develop their community-based programs overseas. Matched dollar-for-dollar by the PVO's own resources, Matching Grants support programs consistent with the U.S. Agency for International Development's (USAID) evolving priorities (such as micro-enterprise development and strategic partnerships) and geographical interests (such as the special needs of Africa, Central Asia, and Central America).

The Matching Grant Program awards competitive grants to PVOs to support clearly defined, field-oriented programs administered in a number of countries. The programs must be fully conceived and incorporate rigorous evaluation criteria. Such a program may be as broad as the overall scope of a PVO's work, or as specific as community-based health services or micro-enterprise development. It must be within USAID's legislative mandate and development priorities.

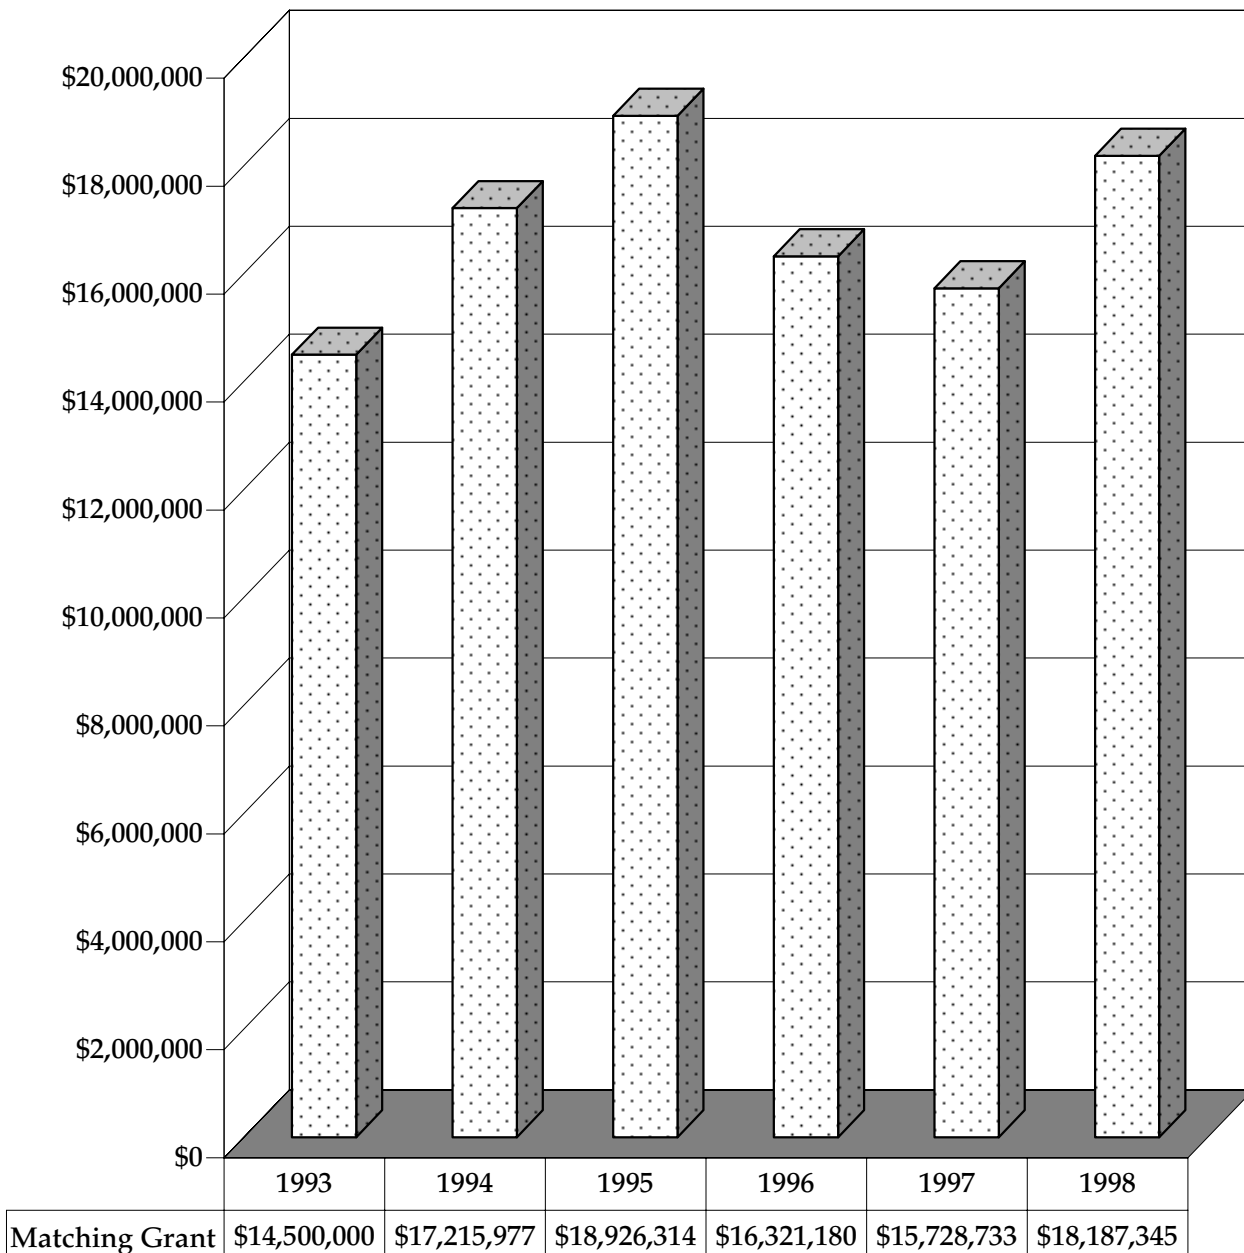

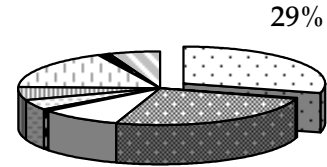

PVOs are awarded matching grants based on their demonstrated ability to implement successful, sustainable development programs. The four major objectives of the Matching Grant Program are:

- to expand and strengthen the field programs of U.S. PVOs in order to increase prospects for sustainability and results in program areas that are consistent with USAID policies and priorities;
- to assist U.S. PVOs to further enhance their planning systems, management systems, and technical competencies to carry out development programs;
- to build the capacity of local non-governmental organizations (NGOs), governmental, and community-based organizations (CBOs) through formalized partnerships with U.S. PVOs; and
- to increase U.S. private resources directed to development assistance by matching private contributions on a dollar-for-dollar basis through a combined public and private partnership.

Child Survival Program

The Child Survival Program brings simplistic lifesaving and preventive health care to areas with traditionally high rates of infant mortality, focusing on maternal and pre-natal care, as well as life-long nutrition for mother and child.

Since 1985, the Office of Private and Voluntary Cooperation (PVC) has funded and administered a competitive grant program intended to enhance the participation of U.S.-based private and voluntary organizations (PVOs) in reducing infant, child, and maternal mortality in less developed countries, and to strengthen their organizational management and technical capacity in these areas. The program is open to all U.S.-based PVOs registered with USAID that engage in international health care development.

The Child Survival Program has two main objectives:

- Meet the critical health needs of infants, children under five years of age, and mothers in developing countries with high infant, child, and maternal mortality rates; and
- Improve the capacity of U.S.-based PVOs and their local partners to carryout effective Child Survival Programs.

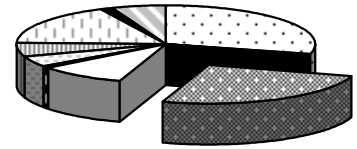

Child Survival Programs:

- Are in USAID cooperating countries and target areas with high infant, child, and maternal mortality rates;
- Support technically and logistically deliverable services at reasonable costs, and address major causes of infant, child, and maternal mortality in the target location;
- Demonstrate viable, innovative approaches which may be used or are applicable on a wider scale in the future for implementing child survival interventions;
- Respond to local communities' expressed child survival-related needs;
- Collaborate with local health authorities, non-governmental (NGOs), community-based groups, and other U.S.-based PVOs; and
- Plan for the financial and institutional sustainability of the program after its official end.

Cooperative Development Program

Cooperatives enable people to achieve self-reliance and lasting economic independence. These member-owned democratic and community-based associations spread economic benefits and provide opportunities for people to participate directly in democratic processes.

The Humphrey Amendment to the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, along with other legislation, has allowed the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) to dedicate substantial support and financial assistance to U.S. Cooperative Development Organizations (CDOs) to carry-out development activities overseas. PVC administers a competitive grants program for cooperative development. The Program uses the expertise and resources of long-established U.S. cooperative organizations, their members and other experts to respond to the needs of cooperatives and other group-based associations overseas.

The objectives of the Cooperative Development Program are to:

- Build the organizational commitment of U.S. CDOs and their members to support international cooperative development activities;
- Promote the growth of cooperative systems in developing countries and emerging democracies;
- Increase the capacities of indigenous cooperatives through technical assistance, training, and advisory services;
- Encourage the establishment of long-term partnerships between U.S. CDOs and host country organizations, based on sound service, information sharing, and/or economic links, to ensure program sustainability;
- Support the program development activities and services of indigenous cooperative development activities internationally; and
- Support efforts to broaden the development resource funding base of U.S. CDOs and enhance long-term sustainability of cooperative development activities overseas.

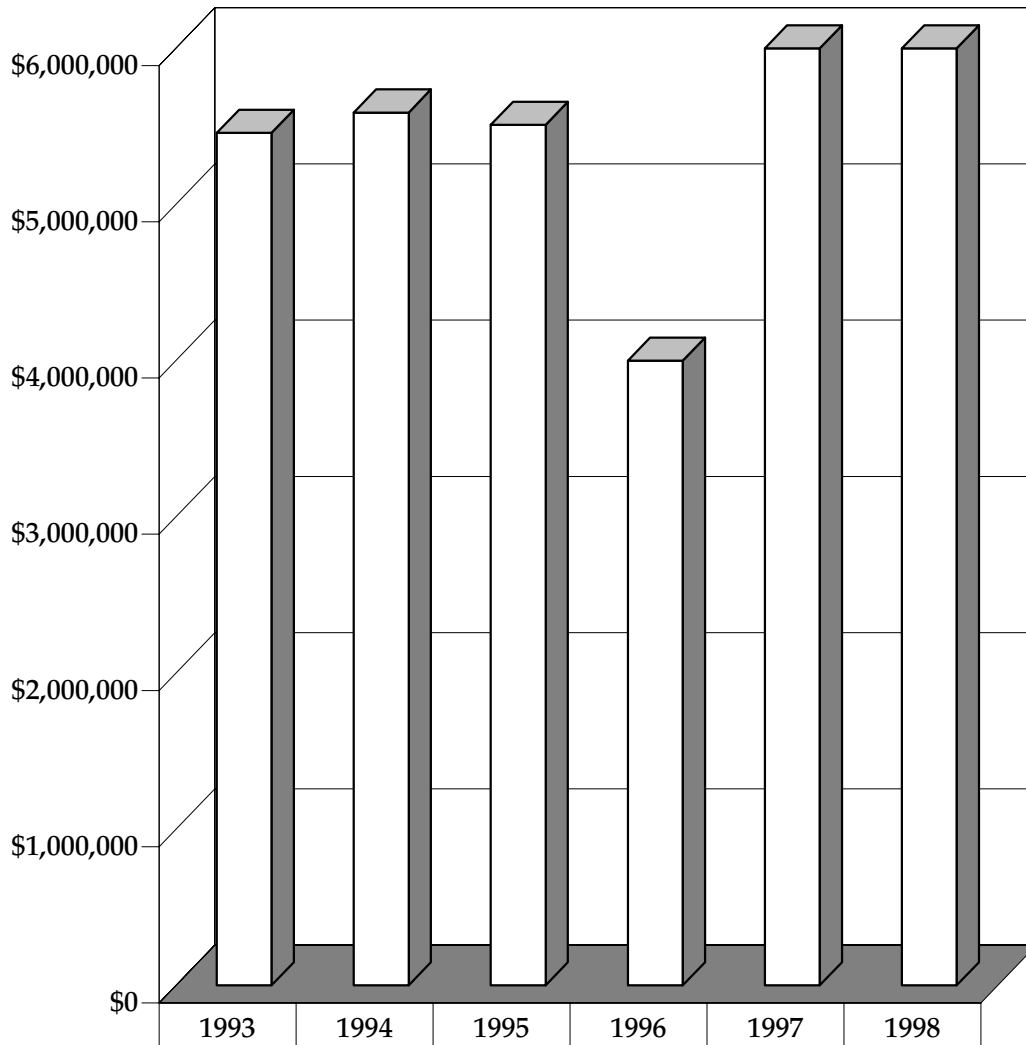

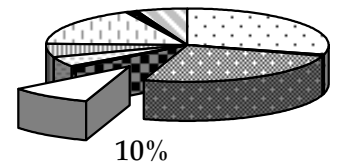

CDOs work in many sectors, including: credit; agribusiness; technology transfer; housing; micro-enterprise and small business development; financing and marketing; rural telephone and electric services; and insurance. In addition, cooperatives are effective grassroots organizations representing member interests in democratic societies.

CDOs that have long-term association with USAID's Cooperative Development Program may mentor eligible U.S. cooperatives that are interested in partnering to implement cooperative development activities overseas.

Development Education Program

The Development Education Program provides grants to support the efforts of U.S. non-profit organizations to educate American citizens about developing countries, the development process, and the importance of developing countries to the United States.

The U.S. Agency for International Development's (USAID) Development Education Program was authorized under the Biden-Pell Amendment to the International Security and Development Cooperation Act of 1980. It was established in response to the Report of the Presidential Commission on World Hunger (1980) and was designed to promote widespread discussion and analysis of the causes of hunger and poverty. In 1982, the Program was established as a grants program by the Office of Private and Voluntary Cooperation (PVC) and is referred to as both the Development Education Program and the Biden-Pell Program.

The Development Education Program is a public/private initiative designed to foster interest and participation in international development among U.S. citizens. The Program supports activities by private, not-for-profit organizations to educate large segments of the American public about U.S. humanitarian relief and development programs overseas and to build national understanding for these programs.

PVC has awarded grants to a broad cross-section of over 100 organizations including private voluntary organizations engaged in development assistance; universities; radio, television, and print media; cooperatives; service clubs; trade associations; and national membership organizations.

The Development Education Program's current strategy emphasizes leveraging the maximum educational impact and financial resources through partnerships between U.S. nonprofit organizations involved in international development and national membership organizations with natural links to large segments of the American public.

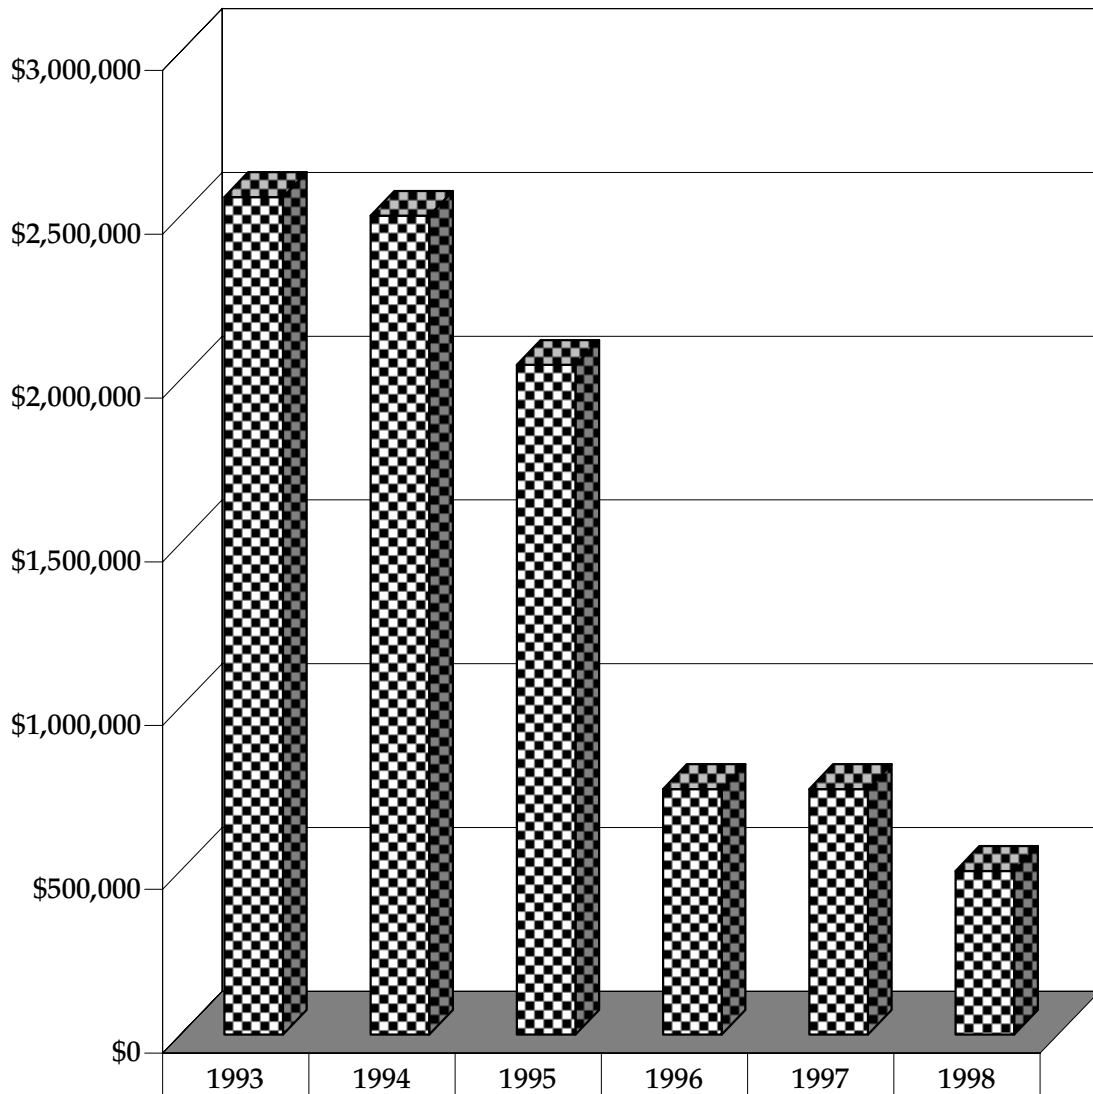

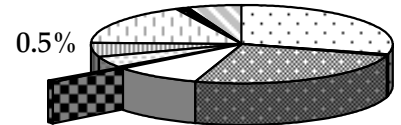

Programs supported by the Biden-Pell grants have a theme of "global-local links." In other words, they demonstrate the connections between domestic and international concerns and communicate why international development assistance is in the best long-term interest of the United States. Issues such as the environment, trade, and health elucidate development concepts and demonstrate global interdependence. These issues, presented objectively, stimulate informed discussion about development issues and their connections to U.S. concerns.

DESCRIPTION: To provide practical methods and resources for involving school and public librarians in creative programming for global awareness. The collaboration is extremely timely because the 1997-98 president-elect of the American Library Association, Barbara Ford, a retired Peace Corps volunteer, has chosen the theme, "Libraries: Local Touch, Global Reach," for her presidential year. The project will: (1) develop, field test, and publish a Global Awareness Discussion/Action Guide for public and school librarians, focusing on the U.S. role in sustainable development; (2) conduct interactive training sessions with an estimated 270 members of the American Library Association in the use of this guide; (3) disseminate this guide to all 57,000 members of the American Library Association through the monthly membership magazine, "American Libraries," and to the American public through posting on the American Library's Association's website; (4) use existing American Library Association networks, publications, and events in order to focus members' attention on local-global sustainable development issues; and (5) link the American Library Association's electronic networks with sustainable development resources and resource organizations.

DESCRIPTION: To educate members of the National Association of Community Health Centers (NACHC) about international health programs and approaches used overseas to improve the lives of underserved populations who are similar to clients served by U.S. community health centers. The project will (1) conduct national workshops in conjunction with NACHC annual conferences; (2) conduct state workshops for NACHC members; (3) disseminate publications from Management Sciences for Health and the International Community Health Information Exchange to the target audience; and (4) develop an electronic network and promote ongoing communication on applications of international health practices in U.S. communities. Project content will focus on community participation in developing and managing health programs, the role of community health workers, and the design of programs to serve immigrant populations from developing countries. More than 300 directors, managers, board members, and senior staff of U.S. health centers will participate in the workshops, and 3,000 will receive information through conferences and meetings. In addition, information on volunteers and paid overseas assignments will be available to all NACHC members, and an electronic communication network will be established between U.S. health centers and counterpart developing agencies in developing countries.

DESCRIPTION: To develop and pilot curriculum modules that examine macro and micro business, economic, and international trade environments and their relation to democratic processes, human rights, and the rule of law. The project will target nearly 8,000 faculty and undergraduate students in business, economics, and international trade programs at coalition member institutions. Through two 3-day workshops, a group of pilot colleges and faculty will help design and produce a workbook containing five curriculum modules. Each module will include an in-depth analysis of a specific topic, case studies demonstrating related issues from international development programs, and participatory exercises such as simulations. An additional audience of more than 13,000 faculty, business and community leaders, and U.S. private voluntary organization staff will be targeted through a series of 7 town hall events, 10 campus symposia and related classroom presentations, a minimum of seven presentations at academic and professional conferences, and articles in professional journals and publications. The project will also be promoted through Mercy Corps and Coalition of Christian Colleges worldwide websites. A formal evaluation will measure change in knowledge and attitudes among participating faculty and students, demonstrate the effectiveness of the dissemination strategy, and document inclusion of the curriculum in Coalition of Christian Colleges and Universities' member institutions' syllabi.

DESCRIPTION: To build on Partners' current project with the National Council of La Raza and add a strategic partnership with the Hispanic Council on International Relations. The purpose of this one-year follow-on project is to increase awareness of international development programs and issues through public education and outreach efforts targeted at the Hispanic American community. The project will use Partners' U.S. network, in collaboration with members of the Hispanic Council on International Relations and affiliates of the National Council of La Raza, to carry out community outreach programs on the local-global development linkages between the United States and Latin America. Major project activities will focus on public events at both the local and national level (town hall meetings and forums) and a targeted educational media campaign at the local level in 5 states. These activities will address local-global linkages between U.S. community development and international development; specifically, trade and economic integration, social and economic development; and the impact on immigration, community development; and citizen participation.

DESCRIPTION: To (1) increase participants' knowledge about the connections between population, resource use, and the environment globally, in the United States, and in their state and (2) to enable the partner organization members to articulate how their welfare is linked to the well-being of people in the developing world. This project, entitled "U.S. in the World: Connecting People and Communities," will train members of the National Audubon Society, the League of Women Voters and those with whom they work to facilitate in-depth discussions, which will lead to increased public awareness of population, environment, and development-related connections between the United States and the developing world. The project will produce, pilot, and disseminate a series of fact sheets that describe the demographic and environmental situation in 30 selected states and compare it to a "matching" developing country. These matching developing countries will be selected based on relevant concerns, e.g., economic interests, similarities in demographic or geographic profiles, or environmental conditions. PRB will also prepare an introductory fact sheet comparing the developing world and the United States as a whole on key demographic and environmental indicators.

DESCRIPTION: To produce and disseminate in collaboration with the National Peace Corps Association (NPCA), presentation and teaching materials around the theme "The World of Child Six-Billion" for use by educators. The materials are timeless, but particularly well suited for many specific events such as Peace Corps Day, Earth Day, and World Population Day. This project has already garnered the support of the Peace Corps Office of Domestic Programs through World Wise Schools and the National Geographic Society, which will broaden the dissemination network. This project will provide a broad overview of the world in which Child Six-Billion is likely to live. Using developing country examples, the project will connect specific local concerns to larger human development issues and to people in the U.S.. Ideally, understanding these connections helps Americans understand that foreign assistance is in their own best interest. Learning materials include "The World of Child Six-Billion" discussion guide, curricular and presentation guides, presentations by educators to students and community groups nationwide, and workshops at regional and NPCA conferences.

DESCRIPTION: To educate medical students and practicing health professionals about specific links between international health development and domestic health concerns (e.g., how development programs curb infectious diseases of serious concern to the United States and how community health care strategies developed in international aid programs can and are being applied to solve U.S. public health problems). The program will also encourage an increased international health focus in U.S. medical schools. PCI and the American Medical Students Association's 1996 Development Education Program ("Global-Local Health Links 1996") introduced current and future physicians to these issues. The 1997 program will further refine these messages, deepen understanding of the issues, reach new audiences in other health care disciplines, and provide medical students with strategies for helping to infuse more focus on international health issues in U.S. medical schools. Written communications, student action kits, interactive media, seminars, and print and broadcast media will be used to reach the target audience. The program will also increase the number of students and physician mentors participating in the MedSERVE Program (a cooperative program among the partners that offers students volunteering opportunities overseas).

Ocean Freight Reimbursement - Worldwide Program

The Ocean Freight Reimbursement (OFR) Program provides subsidies to enable private and voluntary organizations (PVOs) to ship humanitarian supplies and equipment in support of the PVOs' overseas activities.

OFR-World Wide Program is the oldest on-going PVO support program. Recipients ship a wide variety of goods overseas for use in privately funded development and humanitarian assistance programs. The Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, Section 123 (b) authorized the creation of the program and, as amended, allows the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) to subsidize registered U.S. PVOs in their ocean freight transportation costs.

The OFR-World Wide Program is unique because it offers subsidies to PVOs to ship commodities overseas for use in privately funded development and humanitarian assistance programs. It is also unique because it allows small and newly registered PVOs to participate in a PVC grant process that is highly competitive, yet less complex.

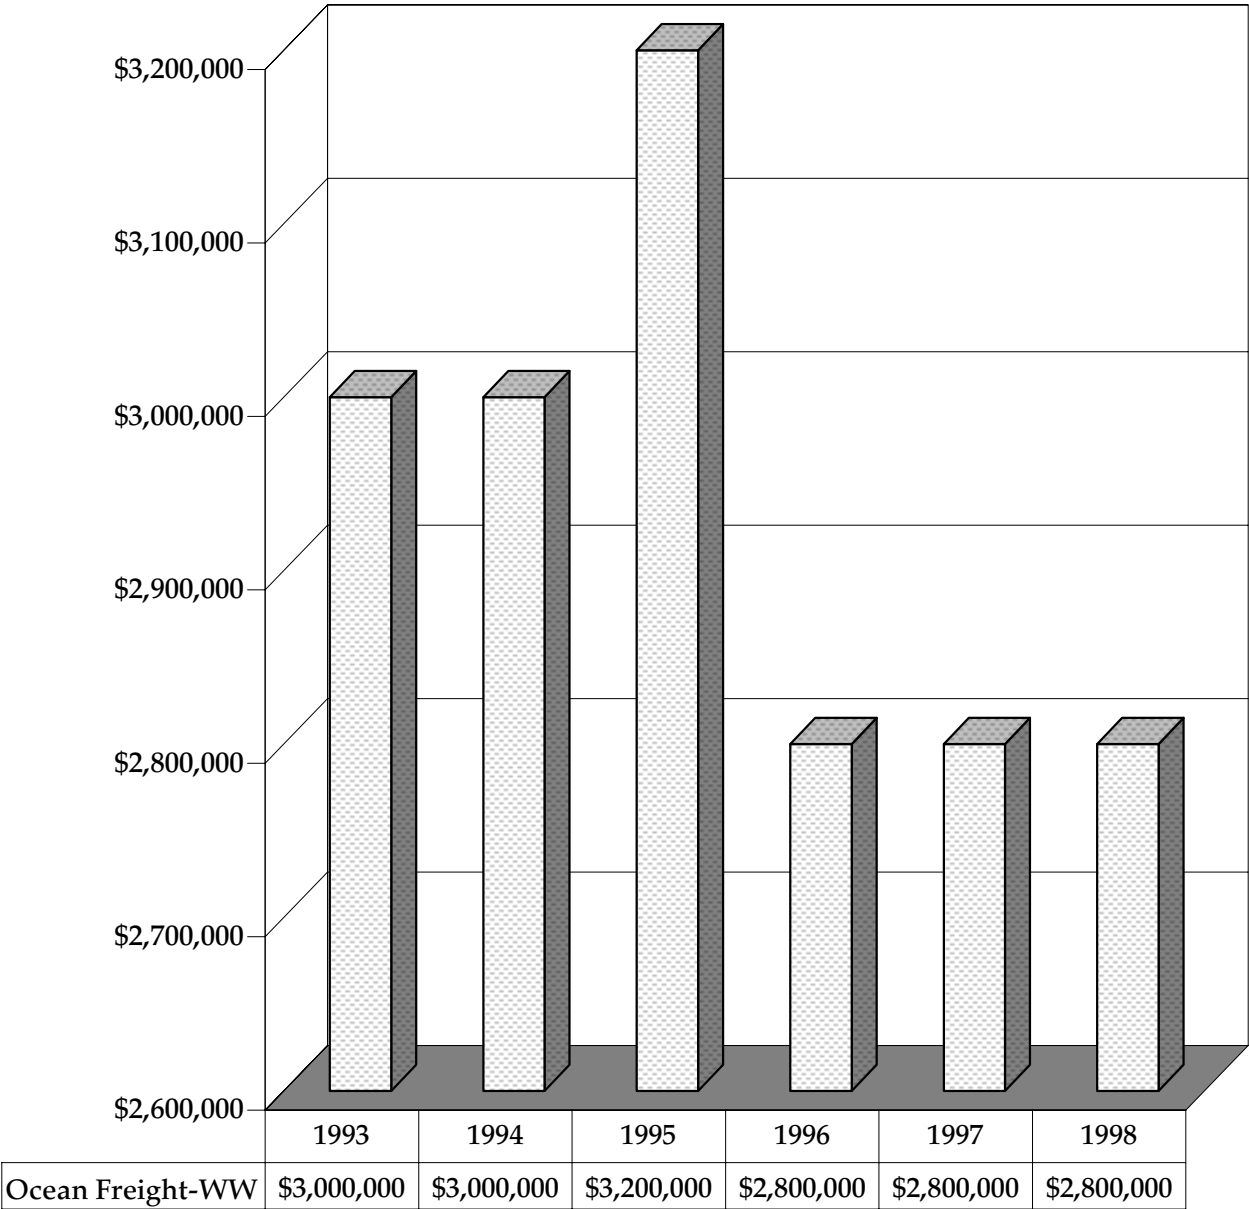

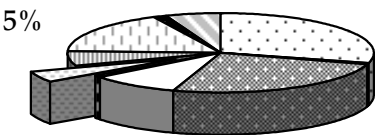

The OFR-World Wide Program provides small competitive grants to U.S. PVOs each year. Funds are used to reimburse the PVO's costs to transport donated commodities, such as medical supplies, agricultural equipment, educational supplies, and building equipment to developing countries.

The OFR-World Wide Program helps USAID expand its pool of developing partners by reaching out to small and/or newly registered PVOs and by providing grants to many first-time applicants. About 20 percent of the 1996 grantees were new to the program. While USAID reimburses the costs of ocean freight, participating PVOs are responsible for ancillary costs, such as commodity acquisition, warehousing, insurance, local transportation, and distribution. The Program leverages resources many times the size of the USAID funding. The overall private-public match of OFR activities is 68 to 1.

Farmer-to-Farmer Program

The Farmer-to-Farmer Program provides voluntary technical assistance, on a people-to-people basis, to farmers, farm groups, agricultural education institutions, and agribusinesses to enhance the potential for substantial increases in food processing, production, and marketing, which in turn, stimulates private enterprise and democratic institutions.

The Farmer-to Farmer (FTF) Program was initially authorized by Congress in the 1985 Farm Bill. It began as a pilot project to provide technical assistance to farmers in Central America and the Caribbean. In 1986, the Program was expanded for worldwide operation. In early 1987, the Peace Corps began implementing FTF activities through a Participating Agency Service Agreement (PASA). The FTF Program was re-authorized through 2002 in the 1996 Farm Bill. The original FTF Program is commonly referred to as the Worldwide FTF (WW-FTF) Program.

In 1991, a Special Initiative of the FTF Program was authorized as one of the first U.S. assistance programs for the New Independent States (NIS); and it continues to operate in all twelve of the NIS countries. The Program is referred to as the NIS-FTF Program.

As stated in its authorizing legislation, the purpose of the FTF Program is “to assist farmers in increasing food production and distribution by improving the effectiveness of farming and marketing operations.” The Program relies on the expertise of volunteers from U.S. farms, land grant universities, cooperatives, private agribusinesses, and non-profit farm organizations to respond to the local needs of host country farmers and organizations.

The Farmer-to-Farmer Program is an effective and flexible mechanism for transferring technology, knowledge, and skills of U.S. agricultural volunteers to farmers, farm groups, agricultural education institutions, and agribusinesses worldwide. Volunteers have been recruited from all 50 states and the District of Columbia. In general, they are not overseas development professionals, but rather individuals who have domestic careers, farms, and agribusinesses, or are retired and want to participate in development efforts. They spend about a month in the host country.

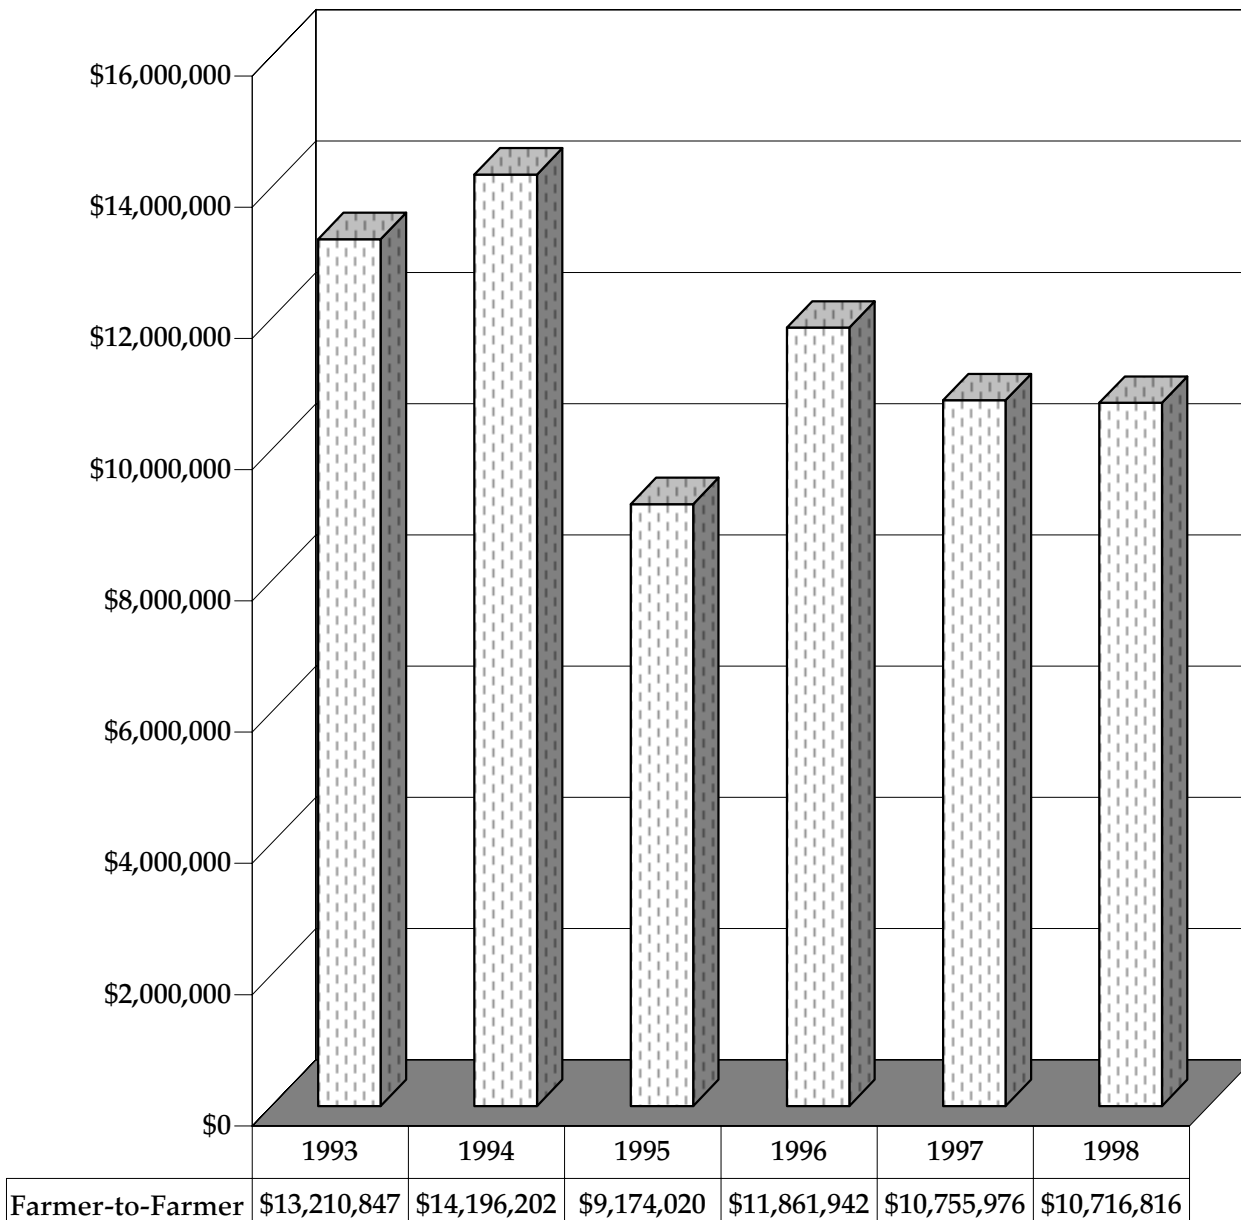

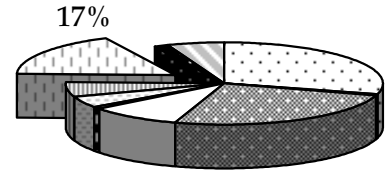

FTF volunteers have provided assistance to individual farm enterprises, cooperatives, farmers’ associations, agribusinesses, rural credit institutions, and agricultural youth groups. Many times, partnerships develop between host country organizations and U.S. organizations, some of which are formalized by written agreement. For example, the American Farm Bureau Federation, at the State level, has partnered with many private farmers’ organizations in the NIS.

In the WW-FTF Program, over 1,600 volunteer assignments have been completed since 1991 in more than 70 countries. In the NIS Program (NIS-FTF), more than 3,500 assignments have been completed since 1992.
